Eclectic family home

It was the wish of Leonie Hendrikse and Jeroen Stock, owner of Stock Interiors, and their three children to live in a robust family home with a large garden. A house full of colour, patterns and exciting spaces which meet the needs of a changing family. This living dream was realised together with the entire Stock Interiors team. An eclectic mix of originality and family history, the house tells the story of the family. The individual story of each family member can be seen, just as their story as a family, throughout the house.

The refurbished house already had a fantastic basic structure. Even though Stock Interiors did not want to go overboard with a completely classical interior, refinement was important to balance the clean lines. This was the reason to opt for rich fabrics, a storytelling wall decoration, silk, raffia and stunning customised finishing. Other materials that were used include wood, marble, leather and brass. And all this is, naturally, wonderfully highlighted by a carefully thought-out lighting plan. The surprising interplay of colour, pattern and light creates a splendid spectacle.

The timeless concept of this family home is the result of the solid and creative craftsmanship of Stock Interiors, which handled the entire process. A beautiful showcase of class and expertise displays what this creative bureau has to offer. A 'living showroom' where Stock Interiors can bring its clients to show and explain the story behind the design so that clients may get a much better feel and understanding of why a certain design or atmosphere is chosen.

The mix of renewal and the family story, the memories and the future, are the starting point for Stock Interiors, who are not afraid to get off the beaten track, are always looking for the perfect combination in balance and tension and who aim for a high level of functionality and sustainability.
